Moments of Eternity

Uncertainty, anxiety, lost horizons;
Dis-location, isolation, reconnection;
Strange screens and familiar faces;
Same times and same places;
Slow down, tune in;
Reduce the din;
Together, but apart;
A part in time;
With a beginning and, yet, no end.

Artist Statement

In a time of self-isolation and social distancing, Moments of Eternity encapsulates the disconnected connections between individuals. As with trees, there is an invisible network of communication that enables society to continue working together. These ethereal and surreal images also signify how the 'normal' has shifted and viewed in a different way. They also convey the uncertainty of what the new 'normal' will be.

Captured between 29 April and 21 May 2020, the series was created from photographs of trees during my walks in Bushy Park. This was inspired by carrying out the government's instruction of taking outdoor exercise by myself each day. I could combine my daily stroll with photography. I also realised the importance the park played in relation to my mental and physical health. Bushy Park had been my place of refuge several times over the past five years. I had rediscovered this beautiful and ever-changing location and able to reconnect with nature.

Unable to access and use analogue photographic equipment and facilities, I made use of the digital technology available to me. By emulating and combining two analogue printing techniques, I created images that could not be reproduced in a darkroom.
